Matthew's Reflection

As we continue our harvest celebrations, I'm reminded of how our world often treats God-given gifts. In our capitalist culture, profits are pushed above all else and children and teenagers are growing up in a society that insists they think of themselves as 'consumers.' It can feel like every aspect of daily life is driven by buying and selling and nothing is off limits. More and more we see status, belonging, identity and self-expression being commodified.

The word 'consumer' is very powerful. It encourages us to always eat and yet never be full... to keep shopping but never be satisfied. Harvest time challenges us to live in a radically different way-to remember that only God can truly satisfy our deepest needs and longings. Let us thank God that we have so much and ask Him to teach us how to be content and give freely. Lord, may we show your peace and joy to an anxious society by our love and generosity. Amen.
